We are KPMG

Every Friday at 6:30 pm, you can find Galaxy and Graham in Central celebrating the end of the week.

Galaxy and Graham, both work for KPMG Financial Advisory Services. Their team has been working hard completing a number of projects, and they can finally celebrate.

While one of their large projects in the airline industry has come to an end, Graham's proposal to help a multinational company make an acquisition in the automotive industry has finally come through. He is bringing the transaction services, commercial due diligence and forensic accounting team together in the M&A process. It is another recent big-win in FAS, and, as they sip their cocktails, Galaxy comments on how these projects have added some great transportation sector skills to those professionals working on them, providing both them and KPMG with solid credentials to work on similar projects in future.

Chris and Quentin, have just arrived back to Hong Kong from the Philippines, where they were assisting their client to investigate the financials of a local factory that is being restructured. It has been a busy week but the client is pleased with the work they have done and their proposed solution. They're heading over to Central tonight, too, to meet Galaxy and Graham for a drink.

KPMG's Financial Advisory Services business in China is a very exciting group of professionals working in an exciting environment.

Can you see yourself working with them?
